"Righteous Evidence" (2nd Thess. 1:1-5) The Letter of 2nd Thessalonians, pt. 1 Sunday, February 2nd, 2025

Sermon Summary

- Paul, Silas and Timothy give thanks to God, that: 1) the faith of the Thessalonians is growing abundantly; and 2) the love of every believer within the church is increasing as well.
- Before we can ever hope to grow in our faith, we first need to develop a proper understanding of who God is.
- When we, in faith, trust in the Lord, and personally experience His own faithfulness; such an experience naturally develops in us a greater desire to faithfully trust in the Lord even more.
- The Thessalonians' ability to 'grow in faith' and 'increase in love,' is not humanly possible without God's sovereign work and intervention.
- God's kingdom is not the source of the Thessalonians' suffering; but the church's belief and inclusion within this kingdom is arguably the reason for which they suffer.
- Are the Thessalonians being persecuted due to the righteous judgment of God, or should we consider instead, that their ability to remain steadfast in their faith amidst persecution is evidence of the righteous judgment of God.
- Judgment doesn't have to be thought of as negative in nature; judgment can actually possess a positive outcome, and be cause for celebration.
- When we suffer, we should consider ourselves to be suffering for the sake of the kingdom of God... personally suffering for the sake of Christ; and that's not a punishment, that's a privilege.

us to increasingly live LIKE Jesus Christ.
